Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.
ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gentles:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours,
P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.
B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gentles:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not a bit stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.
KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness, and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont. 1270.

He Knew It All.

He always did. No one could ever teach him anything. The first words he lisped when a baby were "Oyes, I know." The first words he will speak when death ushers him into the presence where the eternal glories are revealed will be "Yes! yes! I understand." He never opens his eyes with wonder. He never asked troublesome questions. When a boy neither father nor mother could teach him anything. He would rather any day pound his fingers than suffer his father to tell him how to drive a nail. He could milk a cow better than the hired man; and was not in the least disconcerted that the orders gave not a drop of milk; it was obstinate polly's fault: "never saw such a cow." His mother in vain endeavored to teach him something about dress. He wore the roughest of neckties, and, as soon as he had liberty of purchase, the most extraordinarily patterned pantaloons, and laughed at "old woman's" notions. His mother was always the "old woman," his father always an "old fogey."

At last they sent him to a boarding school. The father said, hopefully: "School will knock some of the conceit out of him." But the father either had not read or had not heeded Solomon's wise saying. "Though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him." Poor Solomon evidently had sad experience with men who knew it all. The school was a mortar; and the teacher and all the boys were pestles; but not even continued pounding did any good. The boy knew how to hold his pen better than the writing master, and how to manage his voice better than the singing-master, and how to translate better than the Latin teacher, and how to bat and catch better than the ball captain, and how to handle his knife and fork better than the motherly matron who made table habits her special care. The boys called him ironically "the boss." He took it as a compliment and it added an inch to his height. At the end of the year he came back from school with a bigger stock of assurance than he had when he went there. His genius for conceit was amazing, admirable.

He went to college. He was at first a little taken aback that he had a dozen conditions to work out during the summer vacation; and for once in his life he really did work hard, for he was ashamed to fail of entrance. But he attributed his conditions to the stupidity of the professors; and after he got in he faithfully fulfilled one-half of Paul's exhortations; he diligently forgot those things that were behind. No secret society would have him; he assured himself and friends that he would have no secret society. The prayer meeting could not shut him out, and he attended regularly and spoke always. He flanked with greater grace and ease than any fellow in the class, and said "not prepared" with as smiling self-assurance as if he had made the best recitation of the day. He did not get into the base ball nine, owing to the prejudice of the captain, nor take an oratorical prize, though no one could deny that he was self-possessed on the stage. He ought to have been valdicatorian; but he did not even get a part. He saved his diploma by the skin of his teeth, and carried himself so loftily on graduating day that some sub-freshmen, who had come up to see how the college looked, thought he must be President of the Faculty.

He went into business. His father had some influence and got him a place as clerk in a wholesale dry goods house. He did not know cotton, woolen and linen apart, nor a ledger from a journal; but he was a graduate of ———— University, and from his pinnacle of lofty eminence he looked down with a serene and lofty self-complacency upon the members of the entire establishment, from the principle to the errand boy. He came late and went away early; and always wore irreproachable kid gloves, and carried a delicate little cane. He talked of "our house" so largely in the evening gatherings that the girls supposed him to be a partner; and even practical men, after they had made large discounts, estimated him at one hundred per cent. more than his real valuation. He married of course, and his wife thinks that loyalty to her husband requires that she should think as highly of him as he thinks of himself. She tries faithfully to be loyal, but she is a sensible woman and it is hard work. He is now a man in middle life. He has shifted from place to place a dozen times, and has gone down a step or two at every shift. He now stands at the door of a retail store in Broadway and bows the customers in. He performs this service with such a lovely air that country shoppers suppose him to be the proprietor, and always address him by the name upon the sign. He acknowledges the compliment with a gracious smile, but in truth thinks it no compliment at all. He assures his wife that if he and the head of the house could only change places he would make things buzz, for he knows a thing or two and the head of the house is a fool. But he still wears the irreproachable kids, and he walks to church on Sunday with his wife, who has earned her own dress by furtive services for a compassionate uncle, with such a lordly air that the sexton pays him as much deference as though he were a millionaire, and every Sunday afternoon puzzles his head anew over the insoluble problem why so rich a gentleman should take a pew in the gallery instead of the center aisle.

"Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit; there is more hope of an idiot than of him."—Christian Union.

Tobacco.

Worming must be regularly attended to. Some planters worm only twice a week, but this must depend on the season. The worms must be kept off. Many otherwise fine crops have been totally ruined or greatly deteriorated by neglect in this regard. The work of worming is best done early in the morning, late in the evening, and on cool, cloudy days. During the heat of the day the worms conceal themselves, or drop to the ground, and are hard to find. In the morning turn up every leaf and carefully look for and mash the eggs, which will be found deposited in bunches on the leaves. Much good may be done by poisoning the fly. It is well known that the worms are produced from the eggs of a moth commonly called the tobacco fly. This fly appears about dusk, and is remarkably fond of the flowers of the common Jamestown or Jimson weed. Each farmer should plant, or suffer to grow, near the edges, and occasionally through the patch, small clumps of this weed. It is a profuse bloomer, and the blossoms are easily poisoned. To do this it is only necessary to provide a weak solution of cobalt and a little honey; place it in a bottle, having a small quill through the cork, and late each evening go around the Jimson weeds and drop a few drops of the mixture into the blossoms. The flies will eagerly suck this, and at once drop dead. The poisoning must be done every day through the fly season, care being taken each evening to pull off the blossoms that were poisoned the day before, as if left on they seem to destroy the plant.

If all farmers in a neighborhood will pursue this plan, they will save labor, and make better crops of tobacco. A drove of turkeys, too, are useful auxiliaries; when driven to a field a few times, they soon learn to look for worms, and taking row by row, will go all over the field, peer eagerly under the leaves, and destroy the worms. It is amusing to watch a flock of these fowls so engaged.—Geo. R. Gill.

Echoes From Upper Tendom.

Society people who desire to severely exclude themselves from the common herd should build a high fence around their personalities. It should be round so that each will have a circle of his own. That is the latest style.

The æsthetic editor of the Republican evidently does not like some of our "society" notes. In fact he doesn't think they are absolutely pure. Sorry to hear it, as the BULLETIN was thinking of putting a sunflower where the gardener's dog carried his and starting for Rome to-morrow to be sculpted as an emblem of sweet innocence. Guess we won't go now.

Bruce Champ the society editor of the Bourbon news says.

The other evening when a pretty little actress from San Francisco, was called before the curtain in a New York theater, she expressed her delight at the warmth of her reception, and declared she felt as much at home as though she were in her dear old theatre in San Francisco. "Indeed," she said, "it seems to me as though I had one foot in San Francisco and one in New York." Whereupon a fellow in the gallery shouted in a stentorian voice: "Give me a ticket for Omaha!"

H. M. Pyles has a new driving wagon. He believes in good horses and good vehicles.

One of our citizens witnessed the feat of a robin carrying a frog to its nest, probably as food for its young. A new fact in ornithology to most of us. Yet daily we might be entertained and instructed by observing what is going on around us. Lessons of importance are to be learned from the lily, sparrow or spider.

As a matter of encouragement to agents of the BULLETIN we will state that in less than one half a day a bona fide list of subscribers was more than doubled at this point and that without a single refusal and with but little effort. The newspaper is an essential factor in the civilization of to-day. Every member of a family is benefitted by a good paper. Compared with this benefit the cost is insignificant. MATTER-OF-FACT.

According to a contemporary, a speculating caffetier in Paris has hit upon a new method of attracting customers. All who come to his establishment are permitted to smoke as long as they like, gratis. The arrangement of the smoking saloon is as follows: In the middle of the room is a kind of small stove, which is really a gigantic pipe, out of which everyone smokes in common. This little stove is filled with a respectable quantity of good tobacco, which is kept slowly burning. An air pump outside the house slowly sucks in the produce of the gigantic pipe, and fills a reservoir, out of which the smoke passes into tubing, which ramifies over the walls of the smoking saloon. At every table there is a stand connected with the tubing, with just as many leather pipes as there are places at the table. Every pipe is provided with a little tap and an elegant mouth-piece, and into the latter quills, which are always on the table, are put. Having taken your place at the table with the intention of participating in the enjoyment of the gigantic pipe, you take up a quill, put it into the mouth-piece of the nearest leather pipe, turn the tap, and enjoy your smoke as long as you like. It is said to be a very pleasant manner of smoking. The tobacco does not lose its aroma, and the smoke comes cool and without any impurity into the mouth. According to the opinion of rather sanguine informers, at the beginning of the year 1883 only one pipe will be lit for the whole town, the smoke of which will be introduced into the houses through a system of pipes as gas is.
